

LIVING WAGE FOR ALL WORKERS

Wisconsinites are working harder than ever, but many are still struggling to make ends meet. The everyday costs of living; medical co-pays, prescriptions, childcare, housing and groceries can be a stretch for many Wisconsin families.

If minimum wage was updated to keep pace with inflation for the past few decades, it would be over $10 per hour today. ** If it kept pace with growth in productivity, the minimum wage would be more than double that. The value of the minimum wage reached its peak in 1968. Updating the minimum wage isn't about overreach — it's about catching up.

TAMMY BALDWIN

- Introduced Raise the Wage Act to Help Wisconsin Workers by raising the minimum wage to $12 by 2020
- Supported the Sanders $15 Minimum Wage Bill in 2016 which would provide a living wage to WI's working families
- Proven track record of fighting for the middle class

LEAH VUKMIR

- Is a national leader of American Legislative Exchange Council, which has campaigned against minimum wage increases
- Opposed raising the minimum wage here in Wisconsin, even voting to block local cities and towns from increasing their local minimum wage
- Led efforts to repeal Wisconsin's prevailing wage and lower Wisconsin working people's wages

Many of Wisconsin's minimum wage workers are over 20 years old. $7.25 per hour is not nearly enough to support a family. It is impossible, even with a full-time job, to cover basic needs like food, health care and rent without public assistance.
